THROAT TONSILLITIS HALITOSIS

Description:	Repeated episodes of pain to eat, or to pass the saliva, accompanied of fever and alteration of the general condition or badly persistent breath.
Is it an emergency?	No, nevertheless, the persistence of the fever more than 3 days forces to a rapid consultation in order to avoid a tonsil's abscess to forms, which needs surgery's drainage.
Test to be done :	The diagnosis is confirmed by the direct examination of the oral cavity. In case of badly persistent breath, a diagnosis Sinusoscopy could be necessary.
Procedure done in office:	Hydropulse Irrigation by the mouth. This procedure consists of irrigating the oral cavity with specialized equipment which sends a liquid jet in a pulsatile way. Established protocol. It needs several sessions. It is possible to continue at home. According to confirmation diagnoses or establishment of the reason of the bad breathe, it is possible to proceed to a Tonsilloliths ablation or Radiofrequency tonsils resurfacing , under local or general anesthesia. This procedure avoids the complete extraction of the tonsils,(Tonsilectomy), avoiding the risk of a post operator bleeding and letting, the remaining tonsil' tissue, continue his immunological role in the children,.
Procedure done in the operating room:	Tonsils resurfacing with radio frequency or Tonsilectomy under general anesthesia or Tonsils resurfacing and adenoidectomy .
